

I'm not robot

I am not robot!

The U.S. After two decades of brilliant research on American poverty, Kathryn Edin noticed something she hadn't seen before—households surviving on virtually no cash income. Edin teamed with Luke Shaefer, an expert on calculating incomes of the poor, to discover that the number of American families living on $1 per person, per day, has skyrocketed to 1.5 million American households, including about 3 million children. Edin and Shaefer's $ A Day: Living on Almost Nothing in America is an ethnographic study focusing on individuals living drastically below the poverty line. Individuals living on less than two dollars a day are often thought to be living in a third world country, however, this book, provides evidence to the country and suggests this extreme. A revelatory account of poverty in America so deep that we, as a country, don't think it exists.

Of households with children, 10% of children in the U.S. live in a household with no working adults. Edin teamed with Luke Shaefer, an expert on calculating incomes of the poor, to discover that the number of American families living on $1 per person, per day, was one and a half million. ISBN 978-0-8050-8172-1. Reviewed by Lori Hale. *Edin and Shaefer's $ A Day: Living on Almost Nothing in America is an ethnographic study focusing on individuals living drastically below the poverty line. Edin teamed with Luke Shaefer, an expert on calculating incomes of the poor, to discover that the number of American families living on $1 per person, per day, was one and a half million households, including about three million children. Through this book's eye-opening analysis and many compelling profiles, moving and startling answers Edin teamed with Luke Shaefer, an expert on calculating incomes of the poor, to discover that the number of American families living on $1 per person, per day, was one and a half million households, including about three million children. In $ A Day: Living on Almost Nothing in America, Kathryn Edin and Luke Schaefer introduce us to people like Jessica Compton, who survives by donating plasma as often as she can. $ A Day is an eye-opening book that delivers new evidence and new ideas to our national debate on income inequality. Edin teamed with Luke Shaefer, an expert on calculating incomes of the poor, to discover that the number of American families living on $1 per person, per day, has skyrocketed to one and a half million households, including about three million children. U.S. residents with two working parents and only $1 per person, per day, live in a household with no working adults. Edin teamed with Luke Shaefer, an expert on calculating incomes of the poor, to discover that the number of American families living on $1 per person, per day, has skyrocketed to one and a half million households, including about three million children. This book is a product of two decades of brilliant research on American poverty. The story of a kind of poverty in America so deep that we, as a country, don't even think exists—from a leading national poverty expert who "defies convention." (The New York Times) AMERICANS WORK? Individuals living on less than two dollars a day are often thought to be living in a third world country, however, this book, provides evidence to the country and suggests this extreme. A revelatory account of poverty in America so deep that we, as a country, don't think it exists.