

I'm not robot

I am not robot!

It is designed and maintained by U.S. Strategic Command (STRATCOM) based on guidance from the President, the Secretary of Defense, and OPLAN is a "base plan The strategic war plan is the military's interpretation of the president's nuclear guidance. OPLAN is the nuclear combat employment portion (known as SIOP during the Cold War) of a wider plan also known as OPLAN (but without the update year) OPLAN – consists of "a family of plans" directed against four adversaries: Russia, China, North Korea, and Iran. Known as "Strategic Deterrence and Force Employment," This revision incorporates an Air Force change to OPLAN XX, Global Deterrence and Strike, and aligns this instruction with current instructions in AFI, Publications OPLAN is the nuclear employment portion (formerly SIOP) of OPLAN Base Plan, "a global deterrence plan" that represents "a significant step toward integrating The current plan is known as Operations Plan (OPLAN) Strategic Deterrence and Global Strike (see above). Purpose. This integration of nuclear and conventional kinetic and non-kinetic strategic capabilities into one overall plan is a significant change from the strategic war plan of the Cold War that was almost entirely nuclear OPLAN is the nuclear combat employment portion (known as SIOP during the Cold War) of a wider plan also known as OPLAN (but without the update year). It is designed and maintained by U.S. Strategic Command environment, OPLAN supports the National Defense Strategy's ways of assuring allies and friends, dissuading potential adversaries, deterring aggression, and defeating NAVAL CONVENTIONAL ORDNANCE OPERATIONAL. [1]The plan integrated the capabilities of OPLAN –is a whole-of-government plan that includes the full spectrum of national power to affect potential adversaries. To define naval conventional ordnance operational logistics policy in support of operational plans Description of document: US Strategic Command (USSTRATCOM) (operation plan) OPLAN Global Deterrence and Strike, ; and OPLAN Strategic National Security Archive Suite, Gelman Library The George Washington University H Street, NW Washington, D.C., Phone: / The Single Integrated Operational Plan (SIOP) was the United States' general plan for nuclear war from to The SIOP gave the President of the United States a range of targeting options, and described launch procedures and target sets against which nuclear weapons would be launched. The current plan is known as Operations Plan (OPLAN) Strategic Deterrence and Global Strike (see above).